Background

Tahir's introduction to law came during journalism training at the BBC in the 1990s. Tahir was thrust into voluntary interpreting which became the eventual springboard for a legal career.

Spotted and encouraged by his law lecturer, Tahir undertook legal work experience and spent time observing independently and discussing court proceedings with High Court judges. He was mentored by a commercial Queen's Counsel and two Chancery Commercial High Court Judges, becoming a qualified advocate in 2008.

Tahir trained in part at The Insolvency Service where he developed a passion for insolvency law. Tahir went on to train in commercial, insolvency, employment and property matters at chambers in the Temple area of London.

Given the changes in the legal profession, Tahir decided to develop an additional skill set and cross-qualified as a Solicitor-Advocate at a commercial litigation firm. There, Tahir focussed again on insolvency, employment and commercial matters with an emphasis on litigation and dispute resolution, until 2013, when he joined Chambers at Gray's Inn. In 2016, he founded a set of specialist commercial Barristers at 5 Chancery Lane.

Personal Interests

Alongside his passion for the law, Tahir is known as "The Singing Barrister" and has an active interest in the creative arts. He is an actor, songwriter, presenter and performer. He currently hosts his own drive-time radio show on current affairs and human-interest stories and has performed in theatre productions, TV shows, as well as feature films.
