Majeks Walker

General Information

Majeks is an astute and experienced advocate with a winning mentality, providing outstanding legal advice and representation. Called to the bar in 2006, he has a broad common law practice, focusing on all aspects of civil and commercial litigation.

After being called to the bar, Majeks worked as the Head of Legal for a multinational airline for over 6 years where he led a team of lawyers, before moving into private practice as a litigator. Between 2006 and 2018, he lectured law at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels as a visiting lecturer at leading universities. This gave him an extensive working knowledge of the law and made him a commanding advocate.

With this rich, local and international legal experience, Majeks has developed impressive courtroom skills. He is a quick thinker and a problem solver and is comfortable arguing obscure points of law. He has represented clients in high-profile cases, including cases against the Metropolitan Police and the Labour Party.

Travelling throughout England and Wales to represent clients, Majeks has appeared in various courts and tribunals, including the High Court and Court of Appeal (reported case).
