

Henry Mainwaring (2001) First Class Honours, Oxford University

General Information

"We were extremely pleased with the work Mr Mainwaring undertook in this case. A telephone conference I had with Counsel immediately prior to the hearing demonstrated Counsel had prepared the case in great detail. Counsel achieved a great result and I was particularly impressed with Counsel's overall conduct of this case. His views were very much endorsed when the papers were returned and I could not fail to notice that the trial bundle had been meticulously tabbed and cross-referenced. To me, as a senior member of a firm of Solicitors, it demonstrated the amount of work Counsel had spent in preparing for the trial in this case." Jeffrey Palmer, Croftons LLP

"We came out of the proceedings with a very positive outcome and I was extremely impressed with the way you clearly articulated my position." Adam Lucas, lay client.

"Thanks for all your efforts and the excellent result!" - Julia Smedley, Spencers Solicitors

"...Henry Mainwaring did an excellent job. He was extremely professional throughout and had obviously done his homework prior to the trial. I would have no hesitation in recommending him for any future case". Nigel Steffens, CEO Fespa Limite

Henry has a mixed common law practice, with both advisory and advocacy elements in the areas of Commercial/Contract, Professional Regulation/Professional Negligence and Personal Injury/Inquests. Known for his meticulous preparation, he combines diligent hard work with a keen understanding of the law and a pragmatic and down to earth approach. Approachable and friendly, Henry works hard to achieve the quickest and most cost effective solutions. He lives in London and his practice takes him nationwide.

Specialist Areas:

Commercial Contract.

Henry completed his pupillage at Atkin Chambers, specialising in building and construction disputes. With wide experience in building disputes, including adjudications and arbitrations, Henry's practice covers a wide spectrum of contractual disputes. His practice includes a range of areas in the commercial context, including the sale of goods and the supply of services. As well as providing litigation advice and advocacy, Henry frequently advises on and drafts contracts for clients, including the insurance, parking and sports industries. In the context of litigation, Henry's work ethic is to identify at an early stage the needs of the client and to help bring the matter to a speedy and commercially sensible conclusion through the courts or, if appropriate, mediation.

Professional Regulation/Professional Negligence.

Henry is a member of the Association for Regulatory and Disciplinary Lawyers. Over many years, he has obtained a wide experience of professional regulatory matters and has acted for many respondents within this context. He has acted in matters before the Solicitors' Disciplinary Tribunal, the Chartered Insurance Institute of Costs Lawyers, the General Medical Council and the Nursing and Midwifery Council, among others. Typically, Henry will defend professionals facing serious disciplinary charges which have the potential to end their careers. He has represented professionals facing allegations of fraud, theft, sexual misconduct, gross negligence, and clinical competency before tribunals of first instance, and within the context of appeals to the High Court. He has a very successful record in such matters and comes highly recommended.

He also advises in relation to partnership disputes. Henry is a qualified mediator and has undertaken work in numerous successful mediations, both as Counsel and as mediator. The professional regulatory aspect of Henry's practice dovetails with the work which he undertakes in the field of negligence more generally.

Clinical Negligence/Personal Injury / Inquests.

Henry has a successful track record of advising and appearing in clinical negligence claims, as well as serious personal injury claims more generally, including industrial accidents. He is Head of the Clerksroom Inquests Group and is regularly instructed by the largest unions to represent their members at inquests and public inquiries. He is often instructed by both insurers and families to protect their interests in the context of fatal accidents.

Costs.

Henry frequently appears in the Senior Courts Costs Office as an advocate at detailed assessments. His broad experience obtained over 15 years means that he is well placed to understand the underlying litigation, and therefore to achieve very good results for his clients.
